

Indiana's recent privacy laws that protect its citizens from unwanted telephone solicitations has been a tremendous success. It is reported that the FCC might pre-empt state laws with a lesser law that would permit many companies to continue calling without permission. I urge the commission not to implement any proposals that would weaken our current laws.